Riverside, California

Mission Inn

ONE OF CALIFORNIA'S OLDEST and most celebrated hotels spans a city block at the historic town center of Riverside. It dates back to 1902, when founder Frank Miller began construction on the Mission Wing, which adjoined his family's humble adobe lodge and home built in 1876.

Miller spent more than three decades elaborating the dream. With a special fondness for California's mission period, he directed his architects to erect flying buttresses, elaborate domes, a bell tower, clock towers, a five-story circular wrought-iron staircase, and countless leafy courtyards and patios. At the same time he amassed more than $5 million worth of antiques and artifacts for the inn, including Tiffany stained-glass windows, carved wooden angels, marble statues, original mission bells, even a bronze bodhisattva and a full-size cathedral organ.

By the mid-1930s, the greatly expanded Mission Inn welcomed celebrities, dignitaries, and visitors from all walks of life. Just a few of the hundreds of memorable guests from days gone by: Sara Bernhardt, Albert Einstein, Andrew Carnegie, W.C. Fields, and Theodore Roosevelt (who planted an orange tree in the courtyard). Humphrey Bogart married at the inn, as did Bette Davis—twice. Richard Milhouse Nixon married wife Pat in the Presidential Suite. Ronald Reagan honeymooned with wife Nancy.

Today's Mission Inn enjoys official status as a local, state, and national historic treasure. At the same time it functions beautifully as a modern luxury hotel. After a seven-year closure, the hotel reopened in 1993. A $55-million restoration established it as the defining center of a revitalized downtown.

The Mission Inn is so centrally located, guests can easily walk to the numerous downtown museums (including the hotel's own Mission Inn Museum), antiques shops, cafes, and the 50,000-square-foot Riverside Convention Center. And guests from honeymooners to business travelers appreciate the nearby golf, tennis, horseback riding, Temecula Valley wine-country tours—even skiing in the mountains.

The inn itself provides an ideal location for all manner of family or business functions. It devotes 19,000 square feet inside to meetings and banquets and another 5,000 square feet outside. The largest site, the Cloister Music Room, hosts up to 250 in a magnificent hall of high beamed ceilings—adjoined by a minstrel's gallery. A longtime favorite for weddings, the hotel poses three main sites for ceremonies: the St. Francis of Assisi Chapel (with Tiffany windows and an eighteenth-century gold-leaf altar), the St. Cecilia Chapel (high atop a marble staircase ascending from the Spanish Art Gallery), and the Gazebo (nestled outdoors in the lushly romantic Court of the Birds).

Like the dozen rooms for social and business affairs, the 235 guest rooms and suites display highly individual characters. All follow the antique theme, and many have original features such as domed ceilings, wrought-iron balconies, tile floors, leaded and stained-glass windows, fireplaces, wall niches, and carved pillars. Amenities and services to satisfy the most discerning modern traveler bear the imprimatur of the AAA's Four Diamond Award.

While health-minded guests experience the new fitness center, others may opt for a lazy lunch by the pool. Also available are afternoon tea in the lobby, drinks and nightly entertainment in the Presidential Lounge, and day-long service (including a world-famous Sunday Brunch) amid the colorful tiles of the Mission Inn Restaurant. Or guests may dine alfresco on the Spanish Patio, where a sea of terraces meets a garden of bells. For special evenings out, everyone loves Duane's Prime Steaks and Seafood, a restaurant modeled on the finest of traditional steak houses.

The Mission Inn welcomes travelers with a wealth of present-day pleasures, a colorful past, and timeless majestic beauty. At the historic heart of a region known as the Inland Empire, guests live quite literally like kings and queens. *

This 6,721-yard 18-hole course runs through two valleys, studded with massive granite boulder formations and criss-crossed by brush-lined draws and stream beds. Steep hillsides accented by native wildflowers frame spectacular views everywhere you look.

The changes in elevation are remarkable. The signature 15th hole, a 574-yard dogleg par 5, for example, drops 220 feet from tee to green!

With five sets of tees on every hole, the challenges here are tough but fair. Whatever your index, Hidden Valley has a challenge tailored for your game on a course layout you'll never forget!

Hidden Valley Golf Club

It all begins at the elevated tees for the 495-yard par 5 dogleg 1st hole. As you come down the fairway, notice Twin Saber Rock off to the right, the granite outcropping that inspired our logo. After finishing #1 on the floor of the main valley, you climb over a hundred feet to the upper valley for holes 2 through 6.

Look out from Hole #2 tees and you'll see the green to the right and the #3 and #4 fairways to the left. Ahead lie the dangerous 217-yard par 3 5th hole and scenic par 5 #6. Now you cross over the ridge and come down to the main valley again, playing #7 (par 4) and #8 (par 3 over water) just below the crest, before coming downhill on the 462-yard par 4 #9, which was ranked as one of the best holes in Southern California by the Southern California P.G.A., then back up on #10, then down again on the par 5 #11.

You play #12 along the main valley's south wall, then climb to the beautiful 13th hole, a par 3 with a table top green guarded by granite boulders. Then off to the 312-yard 14th hole, with its mountain saddle green . . . and on to our signature hole #15, a dogleg par 5 that drops 220 feet from tee to green with an 8-foot high formation of granite boulders in the middle of the final approach!

From there you come back over the ridge on the par 3 16th hole to the valley floor and finish out on two par 4s (#18 is 439 yard) rising up the south valley wall, ending up just below the clubhouse.

Bridge to the Catacombs

an architectural design by Mission Revival proponent Arthur B. Benton and the financial backing of Henry E. Huntington, Miller built a four story U-shaped hotel enclosing a large central courtyard. Over the next thirty years Miller added three more wings to the structure. The Cloister Wing, built in 1910, added more guest rooms, but there was an increased emphasis on public spaces, including the large Music Room, an art and gift shop, and the St. Cecilia Chapel. The famous Cloister Walk, also called the Catacombs, with its niches, chambers, and art objects became a major attraction. The Catacombs are now closed to the public. Still utilizing the Mission Revival Style, the eastern facade of the wing was borrowed from Mission San Gabriel, the northern facade from Carmel Mission.

The Spanish Wing came next in 1913-14, designed by Myron Hunt. Working from Miller's ideas, as did all of the Inn's architects, Hunt's design leaned more toward increasing public spaces than adding guest rooms. Here the Spanish Patio, reminiscent of Spanish castle courtyards, offered guests an outdoor dining experience. Frank Miller's growing collection of art and artifacts prompted the inclusion of the large Spanish Art Gallery to exhibit parts of the collection. Two floors of additional guest rooms, including the Authors' Row suites and Miller's own private suite, were added in the 1920s.

Tribute to World Peace

The International Rotunda Wing, completed in 1931 near the end of Miller's life, filled out the original city block. Given over almost entirely to public, office, and retail spaces, the wing added only ten guest rooms. Designed by local architect G. Stanley Wilson, the Rotunda featured an open-air, five-story spiral staircase, another art gallery (the Galeria), the Famous Fliers' Wall (a monument to pioneers in aviation), the St. Francis Chapel, and the Court of the Orient. Miller added the chapel specifically to accommodate a massive Eighteenth Century gold-leafed cedar altar from Mexico and seven equally impressive Louis C. Tiffany stained glass windows (an eighth was installed in the Galeria). The Court of the Orient reflected Miller's long-time interest in far eastern cultures, especially Japan. Indeed, his support of Riverside's Japanese-American community and his efforts to bridge the gaps between Japan and the United States in the years before World War II were honored by Emperor Hirohito by inducting Miller into the Order of the Rising Sun in 1929.

Famous Friendships

Miller cultivated a wide circle of friends from among his guests. President Theodore Roosevelt stayed at the Inn soon after the 1903 Mission Wing was built and took part in the ceremonial replanting of one of Riverside's two parent navel orange trees in the courtyard of the hotel. Andrew Carnegie and David Starr Jordan encouraged Miller's participation in the international peace movement that inspired annual conferences at the Inn. Maude Adams, Sarah Bernhardt, and Madame Modjeska, all played to Riverside audiences in the Loring Opera House (managed by Miller), and retired after performances to rooms at the Inn. Hamlin Garland, Pulitzer Prize winning author, wrote portions of his later works in the Inn's Alhambra Suite. Charles Fletcher Lummis, publisher of "Land of Sunshine" and founder of the Southwest Museum and the Landmarks Club (Miller was a member), was a frequent visitor. Zona Gale, another Pulitzer Prize winning novelist, was also Miller's biographer. Visiting members of the royal houses of Sweden, Russia, and Japan were honored at banquets.

Days of Decline

After Frank Miller died in 1935, the Mission Inn began a slow decline. For nearly twenty years his daughter and son-in-law, Allis and DeWitt Hutchings, carried on the traditions of hospitality engendered by Miller, but the Great Depression, increased mobility afforded by the automobile, and a shift in tourism to the desert oases centered about Palm Springs made profits more elusive. When Allis and DeWitt died in 1952 and 1953 respectively, their heirs showed little interest in maintaining the family business and sold the Inn in 1956. For the next twenty years a litany of owners occupied the hotel. All had their own ideas of what a modern Mission Inn should be and how to make it so. Sadly, improvements often came at the expense of the art and artifact collections, many pieces of which suffered from neglect or were disposed of entirely.

Phoenix Rising

Finally, in 1976 the Riverside Redevelopment Agency purchased the Inn. Day to day management of the hotel was consigned to the Mission Inn Foundation, instituted specifically for that purpose. In 1985 the hotel closed for what was expected to be a two-year renovation project. With the restoration nearing completion in late 1988, owner/developer Carley Capital of Madison, Wisconsin, filed for bankruptcy just two weeks before the scheduled reopening. For the next four years several attempts were made to sell the Inn to an appropriate buyer.

Then late in 1992 long time Riverside resident Duane R. Roberts formed a new corporation, the Historic Mission Inn Corporation which successfully negotiated the purchase. On December 30, 1992, exactly seven and a half years after it was closed, the Mission Inn once again opened to the public. A Gala opening was celebrated in May 1993.

Riverside's Landmark Restored

To its guests and to the people of Riverside the Mission Inn has always meant more than simply bed, bath, and board. It is an oddly integrated assemblage of arcades and gardens, turrets and domes, flying buttresses and spiraling staircases, catacombs and carillon towers. It is also fine art and Spanish cannons, stained glass and ceramic tile, saints and dragons, bells and wrought iron. The Mission Inn is seen by many as the linchpin to a successful revitalization of the downtown area - Everybody's Neighborhood. More than anything, it is an artful and architectural tribute to the vision, eclecticism, and eccentricity of Frank Miller, one which deserves to be experienced and appreciated by all who happen upon it.

Mission Inn Foundation

Following the sale of the Inn to Carley Capital in 1985 the focus of the Mission Inn Foundation, a non-profit organization, shifted to the preservation of the hotel's historical and architectural integrity and the conservation, collection, exhibition, and interpretation of its art and artifacts. The Foundation and its curatorial staff operate the Mission Inn Museum within the hotel. Assisted by volunteers, the Museum is open seven days a week 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and features permanent exhibits from the Mission Inn Collection, as well as frequent temporary exhibits. The Foundation conducts an extensive outreach program through slide presentations, a lecture series, educational programs, oral history project, research opportunities, internships, and daily tours led by trained docents.

Escape To Wine Country

We invite you to visit southern California's largest wine-producing area where twelve wineries (with more to open soon) offer individual and unique expressions of their vineyards and winemaking talents. Over 28 varietals flourish in the Temecula Valley with new varieties being planted each year and that are nurtured by the people who make this area their home.

The unique combination of geography, micro-climate and well-drained soil conditions produce grapes with outstanding varietal character. Our 1500 foot elevation makes for cooler summer nights, and the cooling ocean breezes that come through a gap in the coastal mountains create the ideal conditions for the grapes to develop full complexity with concentrated flavors.

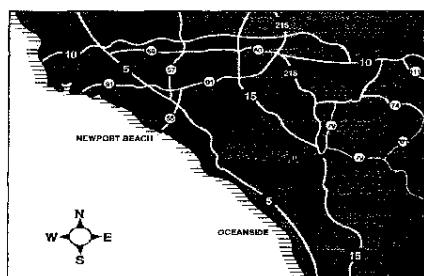

There is a feeling among wine lovers that a fine wine tastes even better if it is consumed in the region in which it is made. Why don't you test this theory by coming to visit us and have a bottle of wine with your lunch at any of our wineries' picnic areas?

You can taste the difference! Wines from Temecula are rich and elegant, fruity and complex, exhibiting all of the fine characteristics found in premium wines. It takes more than great grapes to produce exceptional wines. It takes great winemakers and Temecula has both. Thanks to favorable growing conditions and talented winemakers, Temecula wines are widely respected in the wine industry. The many awards received by the wineries illustrate this. Temecula wines reflect the individualism of the people who make them, each with their own distinctive touch.

The Temecula Valley Vintners Association was founded in 1988 and is comprised of winery owners and principals who work to promote Temecula Valley as a region for the production of premium wines and excellent wine grapes. They work together to maintain the quality of the Wine Country. Wine calls for celebration and the Association offers several events annually for wine lovers to taste award-winning wines. The wineries range in size from 1,000 to over 100,000 cases per year.
